

Sincerely George

Dear Lorraine,

I am writing to further discuss the dip that you brought to Dennis and Pattie's house the other day.

At the time, I told you it was great, but in the spirit of honesty I must tell you that after you walked the other way, my initial compliment rang as a falsehood in my own ears because in my mouth there was this aftertaste of chives and dill that was so strong that it really ruined it.

It had such promise too, with all the right ingredients, and a good colorful appetizing look, but you really messed it up. It was terrible.

Sincerely, George